Dear VC, Prof. Yogesh K Tyagi,

We are writing to inform you that the deadline to apply for the Crossroads Emerging Leaders Program has been extended to September 30, 2019.

We request your support in reaching out to the most deserving candidates from economically disadvantaged and diverse social backgrounds. We hope that you will ensure that they apply for this life-changing career-development opportunity with Harvard University.

The Crossroads Emerging Leaders Program, a program inaugurated in 2017 as a joint effort between the Harvard Business School Club of the GCC, HBS Professors Tarun Khanna and Karim Lakhani, and The Lakshmi Mittal and Family South Asia Institute at Harvard University. We seek your assistance in spreading the word about the program to your students at your esteemed institution.

The Program is a prestigious and fully funded career development opportunity for students from across the world, who are the first member of their family—or the first generation within their family—to attend university and face challenges of financial and social circumstances. Following a rigorous multi-stage evaluation process, exceptional students are selected from a diverse applicant pool to take part in this unique educational experience. The ultimate aim of the Crossroads Program is to create a diverse pipeline of future graduate students at leading universities, such as Harvard, and future leaders from across an array of social-economic, racial and cultural backgrounds.

In 2020, the Crossroads Program expands to include more eligible countries and curated online sessions that will culminate in the weeklong Dubai experience held at Dubai International Financial Center's Academy. Leading Harvard faculty members will teach an extensive and multi-disciplinary curriculum, that includes a combination of case studies, small discussion groups, discussion on potential career paths, and information on applying to Harvard.
