In 2018, Delhi University's Shri Ram College of Commerce (SRCC) had announced 98.5 per cent as the first cut-off for its BA (Honours) Economics course. The second cut-off was just 0.25 percentage points lower, at 98.25 per cent. SRCC received 1,331 applications for its Economics (Honours) programme and 2,665 applications for BCom (Honours). A towering institution of learning that began as 'The Commercial School' in pre-Independence Delhi in 1920, SRCC boasts of a massive alumni network across the country and the world. From the country's finance minister to top bureaucrats, technocrats and film personalities, the college has a glorious list of achievers.

SRCC attracts students from across the country. Principal Simr Kaur, however, says most students in the college are not from Delhi. The college works hard to stay relevant and ahead of the pack in order to retain its position as India's premier education centre for commerce and economics—a position it has held for decades.
